How They Save.

"You'd be surprised to know how much Mary and I have saved since we got the car," said the first suburbanite. "How's that?" inquired his astonished friend. "Well, you see, every Sunday morning we eat a light breakfast and start out for a spin. Around noon we happen to be near the Joneses or the Smiths and, of course, we drop in. They invite us to stay. Then on the way back we have to pass the Williamses or the Henrys, and they ask us to supper." "But you have to pay them back, don't you?" "No, that's the best part of it. Since we got the car we are never at home."—Kansas City Star.

WAR-TIME EXERCISES FOR J. H. S. SENIORS

PATRIOTISM AND NEW RESPONSIBILITIES ARE EMPHASIZED IN HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT.

SIXTY-FIVE GRADUATE

W. H. Spohn Gives Address of Evening—Program Wins Praise for Many Graduates.

"President Wilson charges you to go on with your education, to enter institutions of higher learning. More than ever before the world needs trained men and women; it is the duty of the high school graduates to supply this need," this was the appeal made to the sixty-five graduates of the Janesville high school last evening by William H. Spohn in the commencement address. Throughout the exercises the major emphasis of talks was laid on war duties, on the new responsibilities resting upon the nation and especially upon the shoulders of those graduates who are just assuming their position in the new world of production. Before a crowd which completely filled the auditorium and Sunday school room of the Cargill Methodist church, the commencement program was carried out and the diplomas presented to the graduates by S. M. Smith, as president of the board of education.

Beginning with Father Henry Williams' prayer, which he invoked the grace of God for our president, our armies, our navies, and our people in this great hour of democracy in war, the United States has entered, every number, with the exception of the music, had a distinctly warlike tone. Francis McCue delivered a message to Congress with an ease and spirit which was striking evidence of his ability as a declaimer, and which won him a prolonged applause of the large audience.

In a discussion of "War Time Economy," Ralph Morse, another of the graduates, made a fervent appeal for the abolishing of some of our national luxuries. "America is clothed in far too excessive luxury," he urged. "Luxury saps the life blood of a nation and the country degenerates as a result." Morse continued, after pointing out the many prevailing luxuries peculiar to this day and age. "Why cannot we realize that fact now, and not wait until the time of dire necessities bring home to us the tremendous reality of war? Why cannot we lay aside the frivolous luxuries of life and turn all of our surplus to the government, that American arms may once more be victorious?"

Mable Dunwiddie, valedictorian of the class of '17, who attained an average of 90 per cent in her high school course in all studies, won the applause and warm praise of all by her valedictory address. "If we live up to the motto, 'The American Way,' there can be no doubt as to what we members of the class can accomplish," declared Miss Dunwiddie in concluding her address. "The American way is the way of the world," she said, "and tonight we graduates enter into a wider field of accomplishment than we have known heretofore. Our opportunities are extended, and we must assume the duties and responsibilities of the nation with a conscientious realization of our loyalty and devotion to do our bit. We must be ready to do our part to make the world safe for democracy."

Besides the able work of the class orators, which rendered a number of selections before the program, the two musical numbers were of a caliber far above that of the usual high school class. The first number, a rendition of two songs in a clear, cultivated voice, made for her a reputation as a singer with a bright future. She sang with an assurance and feeling which bespoke a real musical temperament. Isabel and Delilah Pember gave a difficult violin and piano duet which was a display of technique and true merit. The "Lullaby of the Alps," chosen as their number, is not a work often attempted by amateurs, but its rendition last night won the praise of all.

One of the features of the evening was the class song, the words of which were composed and set to a number of popular airs by Miss Hilgrath Sullivan and Miss Lillian Spohn, two members of the graduating class. In the song every member of the class and many of the faculty was made the brunt of a bit of friendly "chiding" and with a succession of embarrassed graduates dragged forward one at a time to the front of the platform, there to be sung to, to the extreme edification and delight of the audience. The class song will probably live as a vivid memory of the commencement with every member of the class.

New Conditions, New Duties. "The war into which we have entered," declared Mr. Spohn in his address, "has brought us new conditions and new duties. Never before have we entered into relations and alliances with European nations, yet now we speak of our allies, the flags of England, France, Belgium and Italy fly side by side with the stars and stripes in a equality of which we never dreamed before."

"The United States has never had a system of universal military training, and with the exception of two years in the civil war conscription has been unknown in the country. Today ten million men have been lined up and await their country's call. Another text which has guided our foreign relations has been the celebrated Monroe doctrine, which states that America is no longer open to the aggression and colonization of European powers, and that the United States is to stay out of European conflicts. Now the United States has entered wholeheartedly into the war, and expects to take part in the punishment and distributions following the war. The United States intends to see that right and democracy prevail after the war."

POST TOASTIES ALWAYS TOUCH THE SPOT—EVEN WHEN YOU'RE NOT HUNGRY—BOBBY

ward, and it is our responsibility to be present when the deliberations of the South American committee are conducted. Wilson analyzed the situation and is now the spokesman of all the democracies of the world. We are one in our attempt to make the German nation realize that it cannot conduct itself in a manner that endangers the integrity and freedom of the rest of the world.

These great new conditions bring to us new responsibilities. We are upon the casual ease with which we have been wont to conduct our lives. Anyone who who needlessly spends money, who clogs the wheels of production, who fails to do his bit, is physically able, is not doing his bit. The graduate's bit is to go to college, to help supply the crying need for trained men and women. We are called upon to keep alive the intellectual and technical development which the war so reduces by meeting Russia's call for twelve thousand engineers, and to keep alive the intellectual and technical development which the war so reduces by meeting Russia's call for twelve thousand engineers, and to keep alive the intellectual and technical development which the war so reduces by meeting Russia's call for twelve thousand engineers.

PERSONAL MENTION.
Harry and John Shawan of Oak Park, Ill., were in the city to attend the high school commencement exercises, their sister, Miss Clara Shawan, being a member of the graduating class. Mr. and Mrs. Strache and son have left for their new home in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Miss Mary Pearl has returned from a visit of several days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Brodhead, accompanied by this city by Mrs. H. Stokes of Brodhead, a schoolmate of her father's, who will be a guest of the family here several days.

HOME GROWN BERRIES SLOW IN RIPENING

Two Quarts Picked on J. L. Robinson Farm Are First of Season, Which is Ten Days Late.

Home grown strawberries which will probably be a short crop, owing to damage by the frost, are slow in ripening, the season being ten days to two weeks late. J. L. Robinson of the town of Janesville, is the first grower to report a picking in any quantity. He picked two quarts of berries this morning. Warm weather and sunshine are badly needed to perfect the crop.

Brodhead News

Brodhead, June 14.—Mrs. F. H. Davis gave a card party on Wednesday evening to a company of lady friends at her home, the proceeds of which were for the benefit of the fund to finance the establishing of tennis courts in the new North Side park. The result was very satisfactory and a neat sum was realized.

The heavy rain and wind storm of Tuesday evening did some damage to growing crops on the low lands. In some localities large trees were blown over and the time of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Fleming a hot which was being pastured in the dooryard was killed by lightning within a few feet of the house. No damage was done to the latter.

Roger Skinner of Chicago spent the past few days at home.

Pearl lodge No. 84, K. of P., will have work in the third rank this week, followed by a lunch. A number of visiting brothers are expected from Monroe.

The Travers-Wick Chautauqua system will give a series of lectures in Brodhead, commencing in July and continuing until Aug. 4, under the auspices of the Brodhead fire company.

The Sunday evening union church services which were planned to be held in the South Side park have been postponed until July.

STARVATION.

When the ranks of the Prussian army were besieging the gates of Paris in 1871, the friends of humanity urged on Bismarck, the German leader, that he permit the little babies and immature children to be taken out of Paris in the cause of common humanity. His reply was that if the Parisians wished to save the life of their children they could surrender. The siege could be terminated and all the consequent hardships saved if Bismarck's thought had been carried out. A siege without such hardships would be no siege at all. If the women and children of Germany are starving Germany now can surrender at once and end it all.

We hear our pacifists walking around the country talking that we are waging war upon the helpless women and children of Germany, but they do not explain the war waged by the Germans upon helpless Belgium, the hundreds and thousands of fathers and brothers taken to Germany as laborers and starved to death, leaving their wives and babes, mothers and fathers and sisters behind them to starve or be fed by the charity of nations up at war.

Look to Poland and see the starving thousands brought about by Prussian invasion. Travel eastward and see the suffering and want in Serbia and Montenegro. Look into Albania and Rumania, hear the stories of the women and children left alive in the Russian province conquered by the Huns, and in Turkish provinces. There is no appeal from Germany of starvation. They claim they have enough to support all their people, and yet here in America we find women, like Jane Addams, who go around and preach the doctrine that we are seeking to starve the children of Germany.

If such a thing was possible Germany has the same recourse as Bismarck announced to Parisians in 1871. Surrender. This would end the war in a minute. We would not have to send our soldiers across the water to fight for immortality and self-preservation of ideals of civilization, and we could devote our efforts to the raising of food supplies to aid these starving people, whose own government announcements are not starving.

It is mistaken kindness to talk of starvation of the children of Germany. What is bred in the bone is hard to eradicate. Thus far no surgical operation has been able to eradicate it as a disease; the only way it can be eradicated is by an operation, and also by cutting out of the diseased member. This is the part the United States must play and as a surgeon it is liable to use methods that are not approved by the pacifist or the alien enemy, but they must be quiet. Their time for talk is past. We are at war now and the alien enemy may really mean some copperhead born in this country as well as a foreign-born citizen who has made his home here for years and yet fails to appreciate that he has received his living here during his term of citizenship.

It is but a few years ago that the present German emperor announced to his army that they were the descendants of the Huns. It is not inappropriate to term these vastals who have violated every treaty, who have sacrificed human life as the chess player would pawn on a check-board, whose submarines have sunk American coast with American citizens on board without warning, and who call upon us through their misdirected friends to handicap the equipment of a host to cross the seas and bring to time this government so utterly regardless of any of the usages of humanity by force of arms.

This nation is at war. It can not stop at trifles, but still the enemy at home must be watched and guarded against. There are many aliens right here at home that many know personally, whose utterances if taken seriously would land them in some internment camp for the remainder of the war. Let us hope they be more temperate in their remarks. Not only are the suspects in this list actual citizens—some of them of the second or third generation—whose language is liable to bring them into question.

ACROSS THE POND.

Editorial comment on the other side of the Atlantic is to the effect that Lord Balfour's visit to America has been most effective. That the English people have learned much of the plans of their new allies—the United States—have fully appreciated their vast resources and know what they may expect. Of course they realize that at the present time the United States can not throw a million or so men into the great vortex of the European struggle, but they do understand that within a few months these million men needed will be drilled and fully equipped. They understand now that the United States is awake to the responsibilities of the world's crisis and that in entering this war it has not been actuated by list of conquest, by thought of future colonial territory and trade conditions, but simply in the cause of humanity to fight against a foe whose sole aim apparently is destruction of life and property and self-exploitation of their own dogmatic deal—"Prussian Kultur"—to the detriment of the world at large. It is not a fight against the people, but against the government.

THE LAST CALL.

Did you heed the last call for that Liberty loan subscription? If not, why not? If you did not play your part as an American citizen and loan your money to the government in time of need, with ample security, you certainly must be prepared to pay tribute to a foreign nation when time comes? If you did not respond to the appeal for your financial aid at this time—no matter under what flag you were born or with what nation your sympathy is with, as long as you claim the protection of the stars and stripes, you should respond to its demands. Like the registration, the names of those who subscribed and those who did not, are being checked off and the persons who did not may find that the next appeal for cash subscriptions will be made directly to them and they will have to pay the difference between patriotism and subscription. There can be no such person as a neutral from now on. The term of a hyphenated American has been wiped out. You are either a loyal citizen or a dangerous alien. The loyal citizens will respond to the call for financial aid and the dangerous alien will not. Which are you?

FLAG DAY.

Thursday was "Flag day" the nation over. It is not a national holiday yet, but this year the anniversary of the birth of the American flag—the Stars and Stripes—is particularly significant. Janesville celebrated the day in a most befitting manner. Under the auspices of the Janesville lodge of Elks a program was carried out in the court house park, and the postponement of the singing program of the children of the city schools from Wednesday until today, added a tribute to the flag—to the men who defended it when it had its inception, and the men who will defend it in the days to come. It was most appropriate that the soldiers of today marched in the parade—the Boy Scouts, the soldiers of tomorrow—and that the school children sang their patriotic songs. It was a public demonstration and one of which the entire community can be proud of. These patriotic demonstrations aid in cementing the love for the flag and for the nation and should be encouraged.

MUSIC HATH CHARMS.

Music hath charms to soothe the wildest beast. It has an educational value that can be underestimated. The citizens who braved the cold and heard the children of the city schools sing their patriotic songs, Thursday afternoon in the Park, can appreciate what is being accomplished by the generation of today. Music is civilizing, it is bringing in touch the rich and the poor. There is no class distinction. The MacDowell club has worked wonders in this direction. The Apollo club, under the direction of its president, George S. Parker, has brought the musicians of note of this nation into contact with the citizens of Janesville, so that all might enjoy them. We may not be a musical center, but the continual washing away of a stone comes by constant dripping of water. The MacDowell club is doing its best to aid in this work and in their concert next Monday they are offering to the music-lovers of Janesville an opportunity to enjoy good music that should not be overlooked.

Also the men of the house should remember that a good garden plot is a welcome refuge and complete alibi when his wife wants to start out making those formal calls.

After careful artillery preparation in the form of letters from influential friends, the politicians are now storming the war department trenches for appointments of their supporters as army officers.

The fact that a congressman wants his share of army officer appointments does not prove that he will kick if the proportionate number of men are not drafted as privates.

The people who are the most active in complaints because the boys play ball in the streets and back yards are not always the same ones who are agitating playgrounds for them.

The fact that anyone is leased with the bargain price secured on a wedding present does not prove that the price card will not be removed.

The 1917 June bride's trousseau, along with its party dresses and sport clothes, might well include at least one working apron.

It is promised that a powerful body of American troops will make its appearance in the trenches about six months after the war is over.

It is indignantly denied that the Turks have massacred any more Armenians, as there aren't any more left to massacre.

The blasé kids of the present day are usually willing to escort their parents to the circus if the latter feel they must go.

It is strange that the political opponents of T. R. are so unwilling for him to go to the trenches where he may get safely killed off.

The people who object to loans to our allies seem to want the United States to do all the fighting alone.

PERCY'S REFORMATION.

Percy was a gambler,
Percy was a thief;
Nothing pleased Percy,
But a tobacco leaf.

Up until the fateful evening on which Percy Sudensdus, heard the socialist orator holding forth on city hall corner, he had never done a stroke of work in his so far useless existence. The orator marked a change in Percy's life.

"And furthermore and to go on to say," concluded the orator, "any man who lives off the labor of others and spends his miserable life smoking cigarettes and sprinkling bay rum on his hair has no more chance of entering the kingdom of heaven than a needle has of finding the eye of a camel in a haystack. Every man should do part of the world's work and do it with a grin."

"He has shown me the light!" exclaimed Percy, and sped back to his apartment.

"Jenkins, have you made up my bed?" he cried to his valet and man of every bit of work.

"Yes sir," replied Jenkins.

"Then muss it up again, and muss it quick," commanded Percy.

"Yes sir," said Jenkins, and did so, whereupon Percy, grinning dutifully, made it up himself.

MAN WHO CLEANED UP CANAL ZONE WILL BE SURGEON GENERAL OF BIG NEW ARMY

Major Gen. William C. Gorgas.

The country is fortunate at a time like this to have as surgeon general of the army Major Gen. William C. Gorgas, the man who cleaned up the Panama canal zone and made it habitable for Gen. George W. Goethals and his associates and the big force of men who constructed the Panama canal. When the new army is ready next spring General Gorgas will have under him 10,000 surgeons, 1,000 dentists and 2,000 veterinarians.

And to the woodland byways fare
And scenes bucolic.

And oh, their beaming happy looks,
Their smiles, as countryward

With thoughts of leafy, sylvan nooks
Wherein to dally.

The sylvan nooks are well enough,
For all the pleasures such may set em.
And if they like the country stuff,
Well, dern it, let 'em.

And those of us who stay behind
And spend at home our own vacations,
Must simply do our best to find
Some consolations.

We cannot seek the country yon.

scorching,
But we can find ourselves upon
Our pleasant porches.

We'll miss the frog's sweet note at eve,
But if one really stops and listens,
There's few mosquitoes up your sleeve
Of ants or chiggers.

We'll miss a lot of little things,
The little bugs that might infect us.
And yet we've beds with decent springs
Wherein to rest us.

So let them to the country fly
Where cream is thick (and bugs are thicker!)
And we at home, perhaps we'll sigh,
Perhaps we'll snicker!

Why?
A nervous tooth, a shoe that hurts,
A collar's edge that saws the neck,
Six buttons off of seven shirts,
A nose the sun has made a wreck.

A summer cold, a scratch or bite,
A duty call to make or yet
A head that had too gay a night,
A bill, a bump, a foolish bet.

Whatever woe may come to pass,
Why must it always be the case
When one of these has gone, alas,
Another comes to take its place?

However, write the woe of one.

and is put together in the most substantial workmanlike manner, if it is fashioned by skillful tailors, good style will be built into it and will become a permanent characteristic. This is a brief statement of the reasons why style is a dominating feature of our Men's Clothes—IT IS BUILT INTO THEM.

We buy our clothing from the leading "style builders"

ROCK PRAIRIE HAS ANNUAL FIELD DAY

Many Janesville People Attend Big Event Given by Citizens of Rock Prairie.

Every citizen on Rock Prairie and a large number of people from this city and other parts of the county gathered at the home of Mrs. J. C. McLaughlin, a few miles east of town, on the middle road today for the annual field day exercises. The event is the biggest thing in a community way in the county, and last year drew an attendance of over eight hundred people.

Field sports, baseball, volley ball, and games of all sorts occupied most of the day, and a gigantic picnic dinner was consumed by the hundreds of hungry guests.

Heretofore the affair has been in charge of the county Y. M. C. A. secretary, who through the medium of a well organized group at Rock Prairie, has conducted the affair.

This year, however, the Rock Prairie people took over the entire affair, and despite the cold weather the picnic and field day was a great success.

A number of auto loads of people drove over from Janesville this morning, while immediately after dinner six or eight cars took many Commercial club members over for the celebration.

EARN PENNIES TO FILL COMFORT BAG FOR SOLDIER

The pupils of the three upper grades of the Rock Prairie school, showed their desire to "do their bit" by filling a comfort bag which was sent to the local Red Cross society, a week or two ago. It was decided that so far as possible, each child should bring money earned through the child's own efforts. Some ran errands, one little girl helped iron, others carried papers and in various ways earned money to secure the materials necessary to fill the bag. The pupils hope some soldier may receive half as much comfort from the contents of the bag as the children received delight and satisfaction in filling it.

D. A. R. OBSERVES FLAG DAY: PROGRAM; KNIT FOR SOLDIERS

Flag Day was observed by the members of the Daughters of the American Revolution at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Clark, Buckleton Farm, with a most delightful and profitable luncheon. About forty were present. Following program was held: A group of songs were given by Miss Ada Lewis, reading. Your Flag and the Flag by Miss M. Calkins; many patriotic and familiar airs were sung by members, with Mrs. William Shwartz as accompanist. Knitting sweaters and socks and sewing of soldier boys was the work of the afternoon, and a very lively social time.

OBITUARY.

D. C. French, passed away at his home, 437 Madison street, early this morning. Further announcement of the funeral will be made later.

Money From State—County Treasurer A. M. Church received a check for $857 from the state today to be placed on account toward the amount due as the state's share of the mother's pension fund. The state pays one-third of the total expended. The state's share for last year is around $1,800.

F. O. E. The uniforms for the marching club will be ready for distribution at the club rooms Sunday afternoon.

Ties Itself in a Knot.

How fishes get off the hook is always interesting, for the most talked of fish is the fish that got away. Chapman Grant, who gets fish for the Aquarium, has witnessed the remarkable manner in which morays will disengage themselves from the hook. If held dangling in the air the moray will double on himself, tie the knot and pull his head out backward.

"At this juncture," says Mr. Grant, "it has always been my experience that the hook or line broke, allowing the fish to escape. Mr. Mowbray, however, states that he has seen morays strangle themselves when caught with strong tackle."—New York Sun.

Securing an Audience.

"And the audience, my boy, were glued to their seats," said the delighted actor.

"That certainly was a neat way of keeping them there," said the critic.—Chicago Herald.

Miss Edith Riley, who has been spending a few days at Lake Koshongong, has returned to her home.

"Tommy" Too Busy To Worry, But Welcomes Thought of Uncle Sam's Boys In France

NOTE.—Following is the first of a series of three stories written by staff correspondent on a tour of the British front. They give a graphic picture of conditions in the territory claimed from the Germans by the British advance, and a picture of the idea of how "Tommy" feels about the war. The second story will be printed tomorrow.

With the British Armies in the field, June 15.—This army is so absorbed in the job of beating back the Boche by blows that the submarine war, the Russian situation, the munitions problem and the food shortage have no place in the soldier's thoughts.

After a four days' tour of the front, covering 500 miles along the line and in the rear, the visitor learns that Tommy has just one aim, to smash the Boche, and just one motive, retribution.

He is a specialist; let the navy fight the U-boats and let the government tackle other extraneous war problems, but let the soldier kill the Boche and thereby avenge the world. Random conversations with soldiers all carry the conviction that President Wilson and Lloyd George don't know what they are talking about when they speak of objects and motives. Tommy is the real authority.

Tommy is a natural born groucher. He kicks about everything from rain to dust and from warm beer to dull rations. But he does have satisfaction in killing the men who plunged the world into toosy-turvydom. In unguarded moments he will tell you that he wants retribution and also why he wants it.

A young killed Scot, resting in a reserve trench—formerly a German first line—had some opinions which proved to be typical of the soldier. He was running a safety-razor blade round the edges of a tin of Chicago beef, preparatory to having lunch.

when a party of civilian visitors came blundering down the trench. "Well now, it is queer to see civvies out here on a glorified Cook's tour, and wearing tin hats," said he in greeting. "I suppose you've come to see what's left of France. It isn't much to look at any more; just shell holes and hell generally. When the show is over we're going to present it to Fritz to take home in a snuff bag, but I'm afraid there won't be much left of Fritz either, because we're going to make him suffer first. The Boche began this show. He made us suffer. Just the other day I went over the top and saw my pals fall as we went through the barage and I wondered if there really could be a God behind it all. Mister Boche has got to pay for these pals of mine."

"And look at France!" He swept his hand at the awful expanse where millions of shellholes merged for miles and miles. "Do you think we're going to leave Germany fertile and smooth after this?"

A dying officer had similar ideas. Said he: "Give us an eye for an eye. Many soldiers are anxious to see their American comrades in the line. France, they say with a touch of sorrow, has been bled. It is America's chance to take over a chunk of the line with her young elements and thus save the middle-aged Britisher of 45 to 50 years from the job. And they point out, as though in warning, that the war will certainly cross to American shores if the United States should fall when her help is needed."

In their crumbling old German trench the Brits were enjoying comparative ease after five days in the line. A dozen or so, with little mirrors set up on the clay parapet, were lathering for a cold shave, their first in nearly a week.

The officer led his civilian charges out of a trench forward to a knoll where they sat down to watch the German shells tearing up a road a mile away. As the rumbling British battery was whanging away, missiles shunted overhead in endless, invisible procession.

Soon it was noticed that the German shells crept nearer and nearer. And then a young sub-lieutenant came out of the line and asked: "Would you mind moving into the trench? The Boche has seen you and you're drawing his fire."

No one minded in the least. The tourists kept to the trench in the back to the machines. At the roadside a Tommy was sweating over his shovel.

"Does Fritz shell this road much?" the officer inquired.

Tommy straightened up and saluted with a wink. "Yes sir," he answered. He drops some heavy stuff around here about this time every day. Ought to begin any minute now."

"Let's go," said the officer. The machines had barely left when two high-explosive shells dropped close to the rear car. Five wide-eyed civilians chorused: "Geel! That was close." The chauffeurs didn't even look around. They had fought at Mons.

Half a minute later a third shell banged ahead, much nearer than the first two. It was a rough, ill-mannered shell, throwing up a great cloud of soil, rock and greasy smoke. Then a fourth even closer. Enough. "Get out and pile into that dug-out," the escort ordered. There was not a single dissenting voice.

Two more shells. Some workers went right on with their digging and others flattened out on the ground. That's all there was to the show. The refugees climbed back into the motors.

As the machines departed a road-builder yelled: "Tell the little dears not to come out in their limousines again all the war's over. We delight to see their bloomin' 'appy, smilin' faces, but they do draw fire."

His Anxious Query. Young Wife—I don't like that cooking school teacher at all. She has neither patience nor consideration. She's actually cruel! Husband—Great snakes! She doesn't really make you eat the things, does she?

The finest street in Christiania is the Karl Johans gate, named after King Karl Johan, the first Bernadotte to ascend the Norwegian throne.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Charlie Chaplin's latest comedy, "The Immigrant," is said to be one of the cleverest things he has ever done. It leads the comedian through a series of hilarious episodes, and winds up in a whirlwind of matrimony in which the entire company, brought into the melee, takes part. Edna Purviance, the clever leading young woman, is again to the fore with plenty of fast action as the daughter of an immigrant.

Some of the scenes were taken on shipboard. It was the making of those that Charlie narrowly escaped serious injury through the falling of a heavy tackle block from the rigging overhead.

ALL SORTS OF THINGS. Carmel Meyers announces that she is engaged to Universal for two years and will appear in feature pictures. Doris Kenyon has now signed on Broadway in a new motor sedan. It's maroon colored.

"The Brand of Satan" is about a young and brilliant criminal, a cut-throat in Paris, who occasionally seized with a madness that impels him to commit felonies. Mantague Love stars. Evelyn Greeley and Gerda Holmes are the famous leads.

"Redemption," starring Evelyn Nesbit Thaw in an adaptation of her own "life story," will remain in New York for a month, two weeks longer than expected.

In connection with the Blackwell vs. Blackwell divorce and alimony suit it comes out that Carlyle considers his popularity is waning.

Tommy Meighan has put aside the thermometer with which he skillfully took the temperature of fanatics and is now swinging various tools with equal success in Billie Burke's "Mysterious Miss Terry." Meighan is kingpin of the hardware shop in this role.

Chicago's sky line along Michigan avenue will appear, it is said, for the first time, taken from one of the towers of the municipal pier, in a coming Selig picture, "The City of Purple."

A recent marriage of Dosis Pawn of Fox to Rex Ingram, Universal director, is an item of interest, just for the fun of it, the couple eloped.

AMUSEMENTS

BIG C. A. WORTHAM SHOW ARRIVES SUNDAY.

The C. A. Wortham show will arrive tomorrow, Sunday, afternoon via the Northwestern, from Kankakee, Ill., where they have been appearing this week under the auspices of the B. F. O. Elks, and where they have experienced a most successful business to the financial benefit of the lodge and the increasing popularity of the show.

There will be the biggest aggregation of talent ever seen in the city when the show set up and they comprise no less than twenty-three standard attractions, with four riding devices of the safest and most up-to-date nature. In view of the near approach of the show, it may be interesting to intending visitors to give a brief resume of the various attractions that C. A. Wortham will bring to this city, this coming week.

Among the more prominent may be mentioned the War of the Worlds, a miniature naval engagement which demonstrates the methods employed by the submarine in attacking commerce on the high seas. The entire production is made by means of models which range from eleven feet in length for the battleships to three feet for the submarine boat.

The Backman animal show, where a combination of circus, dog and pony show, trained wild and domestic animal arena and society horse show is to be seen, is another attraction which will please the entire family. It is the greatest entertainment of its kind in the country and has two rings and a huge steel arena in which to present its program. The Panama Canal is another, with educational features to recommend it. The Revelation show is built on the order of elusions built by the late Rollo, and is one of the most artistic and prettiest spectacles ever presented under canvas.

The Palace of Wonders is full of side show curiosities, the best collection in the country since the days of the late lamented P. T. Barnum, and a hand is a counterpart except that its inhabitants are birds, beasts and reptiles instead of the Human Family.

The Monkey Speedway, where monkeys act as chauffeurs and drive miniature automobiles around a track some sixty feet in diameter, is built for merriment and wonder. The Royal English united twins are a scientific phenomena that hail from the antipodes. They have been joined together since birth and are the most wonderful case of dual existence since the days of the famous Siamese Twins.

Twins, since Nielsen who is at the same time a great entertainer. He is but 26 inches in height and 26 years of age.

The Mammoth Water Circus, probably the highest attraction of its kind in the world, will reproduce the spectacle that made the New York Hippodrome famous some years ago. The same as it was in that famous theatre, featuring the submarine ballet, the arrival of Neptune from the bottom of the sea and the long rollers and high and fancy divers. Elling Coo, the Diving Venus, together with Dare Devil Cassidy and Captain Soderbey, the world's champion high diver, will all leap from a height of 125 feet and give demonstrations of fancy swimming and diving.

The Wortham band is composed of no less than twenty-eight sterling musicians, eight of the finest vocalists and is under the direction of Prof. Chas. Jamerson.

Weather permitting, the entire show will be ready and open for business Monday night at the usual carnival grounds at the foot of Franklin street.

DELAY DEDICATION OF STATE CAPITOL

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, June 15.—There will be no dedication of Wisconsin's new $6,000,000 state capitol this year, Sen. Timothy Burke of Green Bay late yesterday withdrew the resolution from consideration. In a speech in the senate Burke said that the war would be over in two years and that the 1897 session of the legislature could make adequate appropriations for the dedication of the new building.

Burke's resolution which he withdrew provided for the dedication of the state capitol building this summer. This resolution, however, was offered before war was declared. In as much as the building will be completed this summer, it was originally the idea of holding a two or three day celebration in dedication. Now that the war is on, Senator Burke decided that the

AMERICANS AT THE FRONT

London, June 15.—Leverett Bent of Stoneham, Mass., private in the Canadian Nineteenth battalion, is about ready to leave the hospital and return to the front but says he would rather return to the United States and enlist under "Old Glory." "However," he remarks, "Americans and British are both going to march in the same direction—due east, for the Rhine and Berlin."

TODAY'S WAR RECIPE.

From Britain's official war-cake cook book. Manchester Pudding (for four people)—One teaspoonful of maize meal, two eggs, one dessert spoonful of margarine, two breakfast cups of milk, sugar or syrup to taste, jam or marmalade. Bring the milk to the boil, sprinkle in the meal very gradually, stirring all the time, and cook over the fire until the mixture thickens. Let it simmer for about half an hour. Beat the yolks and white of the eggs separately. Take the cooked maize meal from the fire, then stir in the fat, the yolks of eggs, and enough sugar to sweeten slightly. Put in a moderate oven in a greased pie dish, and bake for fifteen to twenty minutes. Spread the jam over the top of the pudding and cover with stiffly whipped cream. Cook over the fire until the oven until the egg is slightly tinged with brown. (Flour is bread; serve no flour puddings.)

"MOLLY"

A Spy?

No, not Molly! But she's in love with a spy. And all the trickery and scheming of the German spies who are plotting the downfall of England are laid bare in this story of Molly's romance—"The White Feather."

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) We are not young to be engaged. Are we? (2) Is it proper to go to dances out of town with young men unchaperoned? (3) How many should we have? (4) When our gentlemen friends call, what time should they leave? (5) Is it proper to go canoeing at night unchaperoned? (6) Is it proper to go auto riding at night unchaperoned? (7) If a young man asks to kiss you good night, what should you do? (8) Is it proper to accept jewelry or money from a young man? (9) Yes. (10) Such a matter, your parents should decide. It all depends on circumstances—the boy you are going with and the dance hall. (11) About twice a week. (12) Ten-thirty. (13) Let each couple take a canoe and a chaperon. (14) No. (15) Say no, positively, and let him think you are too strict if he wants to. (16) No. (17) It is decidedly improper.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Can parents separate couples that have been married? (2) Can a boy and a girl be married if either the boy or the girl is of age?

(3) What would be a nice present to give a boy to whom you are engaged? (4) The parents can separate the couple if they are not of age. (5) Both must be of age. (6) Get the boy what he wants and what you can afford—a book, fountain pen, stick pin, picture of yourself framed. (7) For your questions about the marriage license ask the county clerk at the courthouse, by mail or in person. (8) For the questions about traveling ask the ticket agent in the railroad station.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Is there any harm in a girl's going with a gentleman a year her junior? (2) We have been going together for nearly two years and have on a few occasions exchanged kisses. Is this proper or not? (3) How often should young people be together? Are four dates a month often enough? (4) When entering an ice cream parlor, which should go first, the lady or gentleman? (5) What colors are most becoming to a blond? (6) No. (7) If you are engaged it is all right. (8) If you want to be together more than four times a month it is all right. More than twice a week is too much. (9) The lady. (10) Pink, blue, lavender, brown.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a new tan spring coat upon which I got axle grease. I tried to take it out with turpentine but it left a dark ring. Is there any way of removing this, as it spoils the appearance of the coat? THANK YOU.

Get some high grade gasoline from the drug store—not the ordinary garage gasoline. It would be more satisfactory and about as cheap to send the coat to a dry cleaner.

boy comes to see me and we go somewhere, who should open the door when we leave the house, the boy or I? MAMMIE.

The boy should open the door, but if he hesitates and seems to wait for you to do it, girls are just as capable of opening doors as boys.

failure. There is a reason. Yes, I must admit, a pipe is companionable. We'll always keep beside the hearth a welcome place for Dr. Garth.

"Tail Social Pipe—Thou foe to care, And for Mark and for Barrie, and all the other great devotees. Yet none of these great men ever advocated the use of tobacco for boys.

In England's per capita consumption of tobacco is less than one-third of that in America, and there has been no marked increase in recent years. In England the A-B-C of degeneration has shown no such steady increase as in America. The indictment against the cigarette stands: It is a time waster. It betrays the morality of the younger generation. It weakens the faculty of concentration.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Bright's Disease From tonsillitis. Can acute Bright's disease develop from tonsillitis without previous trouble in the kidneys? Is backache a warning sign of kidney complication? (C. M.)

Answer: Yes, tonsillitis sometimes precipitates an attack of acute nephritis. Backache is usually a symptom of tonsillitis and most other acute infections, and seldom a sign of Bright's disease. Instead of backache or other symptoms which might lead the victim to suspect any trouble with the kidneys, Bright's disease generally manifests itself from a numbness of digestion, stomach trouble, of some sort—by disturbances of vision, headaches, unaccountable loss of strength or weightlessness, etc. of the very severe acute Bright's disease, however, with blood in the urine, might be accompanied with pain high in the back.

Wrong Way to Reduce Weight

In one ounce of cod liver oil (I am 5 feet and weigh 170 pounds) I have been avoiding sweets and starchy foods for many weeks. I should like to try the "Karral" regimen. It is six ounces of skimmed milk every four hours, sipped slowly, hot or cold. How many days in succession should one attempt to sustain that regimen alone? (Mrs. H. B. R.)

Answer—From one to three days a week, not successive, but alternate days. Avoiding this or that type of food avails very little. Real success is reducing the total intake of food of all kinds. That is all Karral does, but Karral surely does it.

Sea Food and Goitre

Do you think cod liver oil would cure a small goitre, and if so what kind of oil and how much should one take? (H. H.)

Answer—If food coming from the sea is good for simple goitre, because it contains food iodine. Cod liver oil may cure the goitre. I should take a teaspoonful of the oil three or four times a day after two meals daily. Or eat clams, lobster, halibut, mackerel, herring and other sea fish several times a week.

Household Hints

HOW TO AVOID IMPURE MILK

It has been said that the milk delivered to the consumer is pure, yet little has been said and less has been done to see that the milk delivered to the consumer is pure. The health department rules insist that milk must be pure, clean, cold and unadulterated when it is placed at the consumer's door, but it only makes suggestions to the housewife how to care for it after she receives it. Milk that is delivered in first-class condition can soon spoil if not cared for properly.

How many housewives are careful to put the milk immediately upon the ice? Milk absorbs odors very rapidly and collects germs just as quickly. These may not produce disease, though they frequently do, but it is almost sure to produce digestive disturbances when fed to babies. Summer diarrhea is very common among infants and this is frequently blamed to their food.

As soon as the milk is delivered at the door it should be taken in, the cap removed, the bottle wiped and a tumbler placed over the top of the bottle before it is placed in the spotlessly clean refrigerator. When removing the cap never push it in with the fingers, but lift up with a regular milk bottle opener or a sharp lined fork. Keep the milk in the regular bottle until used.

GOOD DISHES FROM STALE BREAD

Fruit Bread Pudding—Do not soak your bread, as that is what makes your pudding heavy. Have bread hard. Slightly butter each piece, then cut in small squares. Put in a pudding dish, put in thick layer of bread pieces, then layer of peaches (no juice), then some more bread. Beat two or three eggs light, put in one cup sugar and one pint milk, beat all together, pour over bread, put in oven at once and bake. Dot top with butter. Any fruit can be used, fresh, canned or dried.

Bread Pudding—Mix one pint stale bread crumbs with half cup seeded raisins, two table-spoons sugar. Beat two eggs, stir in one cup milk, pinch salt, add to crumbs, bake in buttered baking dish until brown. Then add one and one-half cups brown sugar, half cup milk, four table-spoons grated chocolate, stir until smooth and pour hot over pudding.

Bread Pudding—Take five slices of stale or dry bread (small loaf), put in granite pan, cover with cold water, set this over fire; as soon as soft mash with spoon this bread (canned milk diluted can be used), one-half cup sugar, pinch of salt; return to fire. While heating, separate yolks of four eggs, beat yolks, cook about boiling point, take from fire, add one two table-spoons vanilla. Beat whites till very stiff, add a little sugar, then fold lightly into the pudding. Turn into a dish and sprinkle with nutmeg or cinnamon, according to taste.

Stale Bread Fritters—Break or cut bread in small pieces (the quantity desired). Salt, pepper and add a lump of butter. Pour over this a lump of boiling water—just enough to soften; beat well together, adding two eggs well beaten. Form into fat cakes and fry. Very nice with gravy.

Sour-Cream Doughnuts. One cupful sugar. One egg. One-half cupful sour cream. Five table-spoonsful sweet milk. One teaspoonful salt. One-half teaspoonful soda. One-half teaspoonful nutmeg. About four cupfuls flour. Beat the eggs, add the sugar, then the cream and milk; sift salt and soda with part of the flour; add enough more flour to make mixture as soft as can be handled; roll out on floured board; cut with doughnut cutter and fry in deep fat, turning often enough to prevent breaking.

The Business of Living

Patty Tells Eleanor of Her Visit to Camp and of Bertram's Lofly Patriotism

"Did you find out when Bertram leaves Fort Benjamin Harrison and where he will be sent?" asked Eleanor as she and her sister-in-law were talking over Patty's visit to her husband in camp.

"He thinks they will stay there only two months. He has asked to be sent to the front at that time. When I mourned over the necessity of going ahead of him he smiled with such lofly tenderness and said: 'Dear little wife, what are two months? I shall know where you are stationed and it may be I can be sent somewhere near you.' He seems to view everything from the lofly eminence of eternity, while I stumble and fall and cry in the dark valley at the foot of the mountain."

Eleanor put her arms around the girl and kissed her for answer. "He says it is the result of the attitude taken by the officers. They try and succeed, too, in taking away all fear of death. It is too high a plane for me to live on. I can't breathe up there." Patty smiled through her tears.

Now he seemed really pleased about the hospital unit going at once; said he would like to think of me there right in the thick of the struggle doing my bit like the brave woman."

"He says he is glad you are going to make it easier for you to leave home he does." Eleanor stroked the brown hair.

"Perhaps. He says all his heart is there, and it will be a comfort to think that the woman who is dearer than any life any more, that ex-pression seems to have lost its force—is working in the cause that his whole being is absorbed in."

"I wonder," continued Patty after a pause, "if I am one of those who would be sent home, if I was a man because I was incapable of reaching the lofly plain on which Bertram lives. I suppose I am."

"I won't listen to you if you are going to talk like that," protested Eleanor. "You have done wonderfully in the Red Cross work and what more can you want?"

"I want to feel the fine enthusiasm that my husband feels. What I do, I do because I want to be near him; want to stand well in his opinion. He is a glad sacrifice to the cause of liberty. He counts it a privilege to have his life and talents in this holy war, as he calls it, and he bathes me in this beautiful spirit and thinks what I do is from the same motive, and I let him. I can not bear to be less than he expects of me." Patty gulped down a sob.

"Your devotion to him will take you as far as his devotion to liberty, and it seems as much in the sight of God. Human love is the strongest spring in a woman's make-up. God knew what he was about when he made women. He knew that love would take them all the way, overcome every obstacle and be a driving force to overcome every obstacle. Don't quarrel with the way women are made, dear. Eleanor took the bright face of her sister-in-law between her hands and kissed the tearful eyes and smoothed away the lines of trouble that constant anxiety was ploughing in the smooth brow.

"What shall I do when I am 'way off in Belgium where no courage is at low ebb, and neither you nor Bertram is at hand to pour any more 'in'?" asked Patty contentedly, her head on Eleanor's shoulder.

"I shall be pouring courage into hearts more empty of it than your own," replied Eleanor. "That is another way to increase your own supply when it is low."

"That is another way of saying that God gives us the strength to take the next necessary step. That is what you mean, isn't it?" whispered Patty.

"Yes. He never fails us, and if we do our part by taking the step next to us there is sure to come light for another one, and strength and courage to take it." Eleanor dropped her cheek against Patty's.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

In walking it is correct always to keep on the right side. All collisions are avoided in this way. Housekeeper: A finger bowl should never be more than half full of water, and it is passed on a plate which is covered with a doily. A slice of lemon, a geranium leaf or the petals of a flower may float in the water. Only the tips of the fingers should be dipped, and they should be dried on the napkin.

Mrs. Y. No, you were under no obligation to pay the other woman's car fare because she waited and allowed you to step on the car first. She probably did it merely from politeness; perhaps you were the older woman. In such circumstances pay only your own fare. It would be kinder of you not to pay hers than to pay it as such obligations are always embarrassing. Of course if she were your guest for some occasion, and you were taking her on the street car you should pay her fare going and coming, and she should allow you to do it without protest.

TOBACCO AND HEALTH

Up until about the year 1850 smoking was confined to the American Indians and no man will say that the Indians were not a hardy, vigorous, moral race prior to their contamination by the great white brother. In the seventeenth century governments were legislating against the habit of smoking, and in Russia the penalty of a flogging was the punishment of a smoker. Yet no man will argue that Russia is far advanced in morals or civilization.

No youth under the age of 25 years has any excuse for indulging in stimulants or narcotics. Tobacco is a poison to the developing body and mind, and almost inseparable from the habits of the immature. The use of tobacco or nicotine in the use of tobacco by growing boys do their

Use Coconut Oil
For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain, refined coconut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get refined coconut oil at a most any drug store. It is very cheap and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for a long time.

Says Pile Remedy
Worth $100.00 a Box

I have had itching piles ever since my earliest recollection. I am 53 years old and have suffered terribly. I have tried many remedies and doctors, but no cure. About 8 weeks ago I saw your ad for Peterson's Ointment. The first application stopped all itching, and in three days all soreness. I have only used one 25c box and consider I am cured, not feeling any return of the trouble for 6 weeks. You have my grateful, heartfelt thanks, and may everyone that has this trouble see this and give your ointment, that is worth a hundred dollars, or more a box, a trial. Sincerely yours, A. The Real Adventure

A NOVEL

By Henry Kitchell Webster

(Copyright 1916, The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

The girl smiled over the very gingerly way in which he reached out for her elbow to guide her around the rail and toward the step. Technically, the action constituted putting her off the car. She heard the crisp voice once more, this time repeating a number—"twenty-two-eight-five," or something like that—just as she splashed down into the two-inch lake that covered the hollow in the pavement. The bell rang twice, the car started with a jerk, there was another splash, and a big, gray-clad figure alighted in the lake beside her.

"I've got his number," the crisp voice said triumphantly.

"But," gasped the girl, "but what is the world did you get off the car for?" It wasn't raining. It was doing an imitation of Niagara Falls, and the roar of it almost drowned their voices. "What did I get off the car for?" he shouted. "Why, I wouldn't have missed it for anything. It was immense! It's so confounded seldom," he went on, "that you find anybody with backbone enough to stick up for a principle."

He heard a brief, deep-throated laugh and pulled up short with a "What's the joke?"

"I laughed," she said, "because you have been deceived." And she added quickly, "I don't believe it's quite so deep on the sidewalk, is it?" With that she waded away toward the curb.

He followed, then led the way to a leg wall that offered, comparatively speaking, shelter. Then, "Where's the deception?" he asked.

On any other day, it's probable she'd have noted differently—would have paid some heed, though a bit contemptuously, perhaps, to the precepts of ladylike behavior, in which she'd been admirably grounded. Today being to day, she consigned ladylike considerations to the inventor of them, and gave instant heed.

She laughed again as she answered his question: "The deception was that I pretended to do it from principle. The real reason why I shouldn't pay another fare is that I only had one more nickel. It's only about half a mile to the station, but from there home it's ten. So you see I'd rather walk this than that."

"But that's dreadful!" he cried. "Isn't there . . . Couldn't you let me . . ."

"Oh," she said, "it isn't as bad as that. It's just one of the silly things that happen to you sometimes, you know. I paid my subscription to The Maroon. . . . She didn't laugh audibly, but without seeing her face he knew she smiled, the quality of her voice enriching itself somehow. . . . "And I ate a bigger lunch than usual, and that brought me down to ten cents."

"You will make a complaint about that, won't you?" he urged. "Even if it wasn't on principle that you refused to pay another fare? And let me back you up in it. I've his number, you know."

"You deserve that, I suppose," she said, "because you did get off the car on principle. But—well, really, unless we could prove that I paid my fare, they'd probably think the conductor did exactly right. Of course he took hold of me, but then—well, think what I did to him!"

He grumbled that this was nonsense—the man had been guilty at least of excessive zeal—but he didn't urge her, any further, to complain.

"There's another car coming," he now announced, peering around the end of the wall. "You will let me pay your fare on it, won't you?"

She hesitated. The rain was thinning. "I would," she said, "if I honestly wouldn't rather walk. Thanks, really very much, though. Don't you miss it?" She thrust out her hand, "Good-by!"

"I can't pretend to think you need an escort to the elevated," he said. "I saw what you did to the conductor. I haven't the least doubt you could have thrown him off the car. But I'd—really like it very much if you would let me walk along with you."

"Why," she said, "of course. I'd like it, too. Come along!"

CHAPTER II.

What Happened to Frederica's Plan.

At twenty-seven minutes after seven that evening, Frederica Whitney was about ten minutes before the hour at which she had invited guests to dinner—not quite near enough dressed to prevent a feeling that she had to hurry. Ordinarily she didn't mind. To Frederica at thirty, the job of being a radiantly delightful object of regard lacked the sporting interest of uncertainty—was almost too simple a matter to bother about.

But tonight she wished she'd started half an hour earlier. Even her husband discovered it. He brought in a cigarette, and stood smiling down at her with the complacent look that characterizes a married man of forty when he finds himself dressed in evening harness ten minutes before his wife. She shot a glance of useful inquiry at him, and asked him what time it was.

"Seven twenty-two thirty-six," he told her. She made no comment except with her eyebrows, but he must have been looking at her, for he wanted to know, good-humoredly, what all the excitement was about.

"You could go down as you are and not a man here tonight would know the difference. And as for the women—well, if they have something on you for once, they'll be all the better pleased."

"Don't try to be knowing and philosophical, and—Havelock Ellis, Martin dear," she admonished him, pending a minute operation with an infinitesimal hairpin. "It isn't your lay a bit. Just concentrate your mind on one thing, and that's being nice to Hermione Woodruff, and on seeing that Roddy is."

He asked, "Why Roddy?" in a tone that matched hers; looked at her, widened his eyes, said "Eh?" to himself and, finally, shook his head. "Nothing to it," he pronounced.

She dispatched the maid with the key to the wall safe in her husband's room. "Why isn't there?" she demanded. "Rodney won't look at young girls. They bore him to death. But Hermione can understand fully half the things he talks about. She's got lots of tact and skill, she's good-looking and no older than I and I'm two years younger than Roddy. She'll appreciate a real husband, after having been married five years to John Woodruff. And she's rich enough, now, so that his wild-eyed way of practicing law won't matter."

"All very nice and reasonable," he conceded, "but somehow the notion of Rodney Aldrich trying to marry a rich widow is one I'm not equal to." He looked at his watch again. "By the way, didn't you say he was coming early?"

She nodded. They heard, just then, faint and far away, the ring of the doorbell.

"Wait a second," he said. "Let's see if it's Roddy."

There was no mistaking the voice they heard speaking the moment the door opened—a voice with a crisp ring to it that sounded always younger than his years. What they heard the butler say to him was disconcerting.

"You're terribly wet, sir!"

Frederica turned on her husband a look of despair. "He's walked through that rain! Do run down and send him up to me. I can imagine how he'll look."

She was mistaken about that, though. For once Frederica had overestimated her powers, stimulated though they were by the way she heard her husband say:

"Praise heaven you can wear my clothes. Run along upstairs and break yourself gently to Freddy."

She heard him come squadding up the stairs and along the hall, and then in her doorway she saw him. His baggy gray tweed suit was dark with water and toned down by a liberal stipple of mud spatters. Both his side pockets had been, apparently, strained to the utmost to accommodate what looked like a bunch of pasteboard-bound notebooks, now far on the way to their original pulp, and lopped dependently outward. A melancholy pool had already begun forming about his feet. His face, above the dismal wreck, beamed good-humored, innocent affection at her. It was a big-featured, serene, rosy face, and the unmistakable intellectual power of it, which became apparent the moment he got his faculties into action, had a trick of hiding, at other times, behind a mere robust simplicity.

"Good gracious!" he said. "I didn't know you were going to have a party."

CHAPTER II.

What Happened to Frederica's Plan.

At twenty-seven minutes after seven that evening, Frederica Whitney was about ten minutes before the hour at which she had invited guests to dinner—not quite near enough dressed to prevent a feeling that she had to hurry. Ordinarily she didn't mind. To Frederica at thirty, the job of being a radiantly delightful object of regard lacked the sporting interest of uncertainty—was almost too simple a matter to bother about.

But tonight she wished she'd started half an hour earlier. Even her husband discovered it. He brought in a cigarette, and stood smiling down at her with the complacent look that characterizes a married man of forty when he finds himself dressed in evening harness ten minutes before his wife. She shot a glance of useful inquiry at him, and asked him what time it was.

"Seven twenty-two thirty-six," he told her. She made no comment except with her eyebrows, but he must have been looking at her, for he wanted to know, good-humoredly, what all the excitement was about.

"You could go down as you are and not a man here tonight would know the difference. And as for the women—well, if they have something on you for once, they'll be all the better pleased."

"Don't try to be knowing and philosophical, and—Havelock Ellis, Martin dear," she admonished him, pending a minute operation with an infinitesimal hairpin. "It isn't your lay a bit. Just concentrate your mind on one thing, and that's being nice to Hermione Woodruff, and on seeing that Roddy is."

He asked, "Why Roddy?" in a tone that matched hers; looked at her, widened his eyes, said "Eh?" to himself and, finally, shook his head. "Nothing to it," he pronounced.

She dispatched the maid with the key to the wall safe in her husband's room. "Why isn't there?" she demanded. "Rodney won't look at young girls. They bore him to death. But Hermione can understand fully half the things he talks about. She's got lots of tact and skill, she's good-looking and no older than I and I'm two years younger than Roddy. She'll appreciate a real husband, after having been married five years to John Woodruff. And she's rich enough, now, so that his wild-eyed way of practicing law won't matter."

"All very nice and reasonable," he conceded, "but somehow the notion of Rodney Aldrich trying to marry a rich widow is one I'm not equal to." He looked at his watch again. "By the way, didn't you say he was coming early?"

She nodded. They heard, just then, faint and far away, the ring of the doorbell.

"Wait a second," he said. "Let's see if it's Roddy."

There was no mistaking the voice they heard speaking the moment the door opened—a voice with a crisp ring to it that sounded always younger than his years. What they heard the butler say to him was disconcerting.

"You're terribly wet, sir!"

Frederica turned on her husband a look of despair. "He's walked through that rain! Do run down and send him up to me. I can imagine how he'll look."

She was mistaken about that, though. For once Frederica had overestimated her powers, stimulated though they were by the way she heard her husband say:

"Praise heaven you can wear my clothes. Run along upstairs and break yourself gently to Freddy."

She heard him come squadding up the stairs and along the hall, and then in her doorway she saw him. His baggy gray tweed suit was dark with water and toned down by a liberal stipple of mud spatters. Both his side pockets had been, apparently, strained to the utmost to accommodate what looked like a bunch of pasteboard-bound notebooks, now far on the way to their original pulp, and lopped dependently outward. A melancholy pool had already begun forming about his feet. His face, above the dismal wreck, beamed good-humored, innocent affection at her. It was a big-featured, serene, rosy face, and the costed by a burly negro fruit vender with, "Th' top uv th' mornin' to ye, an' would ye be after wantin' to buy a bit o' fruit, soor?"

The Irishman stared at him in amazement. "An' how long have ye been here?" he finally asked.

"Goin' on three months yer honor," said the vender, thinking of the time since he had left his inland home.

"Three months is it? Only three months and as black as that? Faith I'll not land."

A certain milkman was in the habit watering his milk to the required consistency before starting on his rounds in the morning.

One day recently, by some unlucky chance, the man omitted to do so, but, to his joy, he discovered at the first house he called at a huge cask, strongly banded with iron, and filled to the brim with water, the head having apparently just been taken off. Such a chance of repairing his neglect was too good to be lost, and the milkman had just succeeded in watering the milk most satisfactorily when the figure of the master of the house appeared in the doorway and a voice asked sweetly: "Are you sure you've put in enough milk?"

Poor John was petrified.

"If I were you," continued the voice, "I should have chosen some other cask. My doctor has ordered me a course of sea water baths, you know, and you have just mixed your milk with salt water. But perhaps your customers like it that way."

ARGENTINA GAS METERS

OUTRUN AMERICAN METERS

Buenos Aires, June 15.—A North American resident of Buenos Aires received his monthly gas bill the other day. His home is lighted electrically. He uses gas only to cook. His domestic establishment is very modest. In his kitchen is a two-burner stove. There is no other means gas can be consumed in his home unless it leaks. Buenos Aires gas is so thin that sometimes it flickers out of itself even when turned on full-head. So a leak is not an impossibility.

To guard against leakage the North American always has his gas meter. Gas is also notoriously expensive in Argentina. Therefore the North American gave instructions to use it very economically.

But—his gas bill for April was $33.40, gold.

He told an English friend about the bill.

"That's nothing," replied the friend. "My bill was $40."

The gas company, however, has some excuse for its prices. Coal from which gas is made is nearly $40, gold, per ton.

The per capita consumption of gas in the United States now exceeds twenty pounds a year, slightly less than half the consumption in Great Britain.

"Papa, what is the difference between a sanitarium and an asylum?" "About $100 a week."—New York Times.

Secrets of the Russian Royal Family Revealed

The strangest story ever written is now appearing in the Chicago Sunday Examiner. It is the story of the hidden mysteries of the Imperial Russian Palace of the Romanoffs. The terrible revels, the midnight debauches, the scarlet crimes of the favorites of that great dynasty surpass the farthest stretch of the imagination.

IN THIS SUNDAY'S
Chicago Examiner

The Monk Ilidor, confidant of the murdered Rasputin, tells the story of the blood-stained Orloff Diamond and of the great Russian collection of jewels now in the hands of the revolutionists.

And he also tells how the great Russian Ballet composing two thousand of the most beautiful girls in Russia has been virtually thrown upon the market without support. The Czar's fascination for dancers, his payment of Twenty Million Rubles a year for the support of these famous Russian beauties and the wild revels of this Court of Extravagance form such a story as has never been written before. HAVE BIG PROGRAM FOR J. M. CO. PICNIC TOMORROW AT YOST'S

Plant Employees and Their Friends in Annual Outing Tomorrow Have Planned Gala Day.

Members of the committee on arrangements for the nineteenth annual outing of the Janesville Machine Company employees, their families, sweethearts and friends, this morning announced the program of activities planned for the picnic which will be held tomorrow at Yost Park.

Thus far the patriotic demonstration planned for the afternoon in connection with the outing has been popular with the ball game between picked nines from company M and the machineists. Three prominent local speakers will address the company, and there will be some interesting songs sung by "Bob" Dalley and the singing of "America" by all. The winners of the ball game will receive a dollar gold piece. The losers will be out for the "jack" for their company fund.

The Bowler City Band has been engaged for the day and for the dance planned for the evening.

The first special car will leave the corner of Court and Main streets at nine o'clock. Excursion tickets will be on sale at the machine company office and also at the Music Shop of B. W. Kuhlrow & Co. across from the park, from 8 to 9 o'clock. At noon the committee will serve cream and sugar free. Picknickers are urged to bring their own cups and plates to carry it in.

The program as announced today is as follows:

9:00 a. m.—First car leaves Janesville.

10:00 to 12:00—100 yard race for boys—1st prize, ball mitt; 2nd, ball; 3rd, knife.

100 foot race for women—1st prize, fancy work bag; 2d, box candy.

700 foot race for girls who are under 12 years—1st, hair ribbon; 2d, hair ribbon.

Three legged race for boys—1st, two baseballs.

Tug of war—1st, box of cigars; Harry Curry's Team vs. Charles Hudson's Team.

Dinner.

Afternoon, promptly at 2 p. m. Selection by the Bowler City Band. Drill by Company M. First regiment.

Short talks by three of Janesville's most prominent speakers.

Song by Robert Dalley.

"America," by all, led by Robert Dalley.

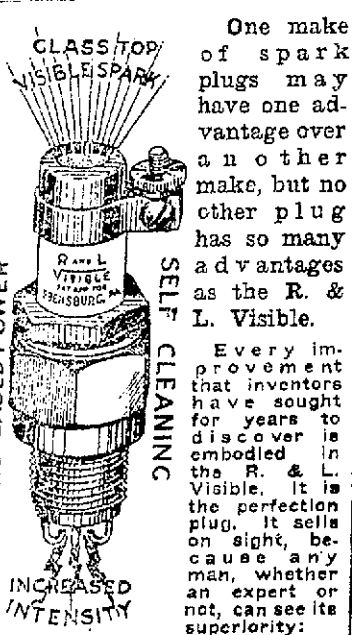

Ball game—Company M vs. The J. M. C. purse $10.

Honey is wholesome, strengthening, cleansing, heating and nourishing.

ICE MINT

Rub a little soothing, cooling Ice Mint on those poor, tired, swollen, burning feet. Ah, how cool, easy and comfortable it makes them feel. Instantly eases and soothes away all burning and you will want to have for joy. No foolishness. Ice Mint will soothe up any corn whether hard, soft or between the toes so that it can be lifted out easily with the fingers. There is no pain and not one bit of soreness when applying Ice Mint or afterwards and it doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin. Try it. Just ask in any drug store for a small jar of Ice Mint and end your foot troubles for good. It costs little and acts so quickly and gently it seems like magic. You'll say so yourself.

Seven Advantages of the R. & L. Visible Spark Plug Over Ordinary Spark Plugs

"Sparks Right In Sight"

- 1.—An auxiliary spark, in the top of the plug, shows at a glance whether the plug is sparking and whether the spark is strong or weak.
- 2.—This double jump greatly intensifies the spark, producing perfect combustion and reducing accumulation of carbon in cylinders.
- 3.—Makes cold weather starting easy and gives you a quick get away.
- 4.—Gives more power on the hills.
- 5.—More speed because of a smoother, more efficient flow of power.
- 6.—Gives better results on a leaner mixture, hence economy.
- 7.—Never fouls because the spark is so intense, it automatically "self cleans" the plug by burning away the carbon as it accumulates.

In addition to these advantages, the plug is guaranteed against breakage of any part, porcelain included.

PRICE, $1.50 EACH, POSTPAID

I can use an energetic salesman in each county who will devote his time to calling on automobile owners and demonstrating the plug.

Running a Race A Sermon for Young People

By REV. JAMES M. GRAY, D.D. Dean of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So run, that ye may obtain. And every man which striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.—1 Cor. 9:24-25.

I have chosen these words because they touch a subject in which most young people are interested in these days—athletics.

Paul was a Roman citizen, but he traveled a good deal in Greece in the course of his missionary work; and it is with this country we chiefly associate the idea of outdoor sports.

Corinth was a great commercial city of Greece, where they thought and talked about their running races as much as we think and talk about our baseball and football games.

Knowing this, Paul uses an illustration that would attract their attention and impress them with the great Christian truth he wishes to teach. That truth is the future reward those Christians obtain who faithfully serve the Lord Jesus Christ in this life.

The figure is that of a running race. In a real race anyone may not run just because he wishes to do so. He must have certain qualifications and be properly entered in the race.

And it is so in the Christian race of which Paul writes. One must be a Christian before he can enter that race, and all people are not Christians.

But who is a Christian? Some think they are Christians because they are not heathens, or because they live in a Christian land, or because their parents were Christians, or because they try to live a moral life, or because they attend church or Sunday school.

But this is not right. Paul teaches in another place (II Cor. 5:17), that a Christian is a new creature, or a new creation altogether; and this agrees with what Jesus Christ said: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God" (John 3:3).

And how may one be born again? The gospel of John, 1:12, 13 answers that question when, speaking of Jesus Christ, it says: "As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name, which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

We see that to be born again is to receive Jesus Christ as our Savior. And to receive him as our Savior is to believe on him, to put our trust in him to be saved, and pledge ourselves by his grace to follow him as our Lord.

But if you have done this, what then? We come back to our text for answer. Paul says, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize?" In other words, all Christians are running in this race, but all will not win the prize. That does not mean that all real Christians are not saved or that all such will not go to heaven.

But it means that it is one thing to be saved and go to heaven and another thing to get the prize Paul talks about. Just what that prize is he touches on a little later, but here he simply says, "So run, that ye may obtain."

Is not that what we want to do? Do we not want to run successfully? Do we not want to obtain all that God has so lovingly promised us in his Son?

How may we do it? Here is a hint. "And every man which striveth for the mastery," says Paul, "is temperate in all things." You know how it is if you want to be a good all-around athlete. You must take good care of yourself. You must eat the right kind of food, and sleep well, and exercise regularly and practice hard, and all that kind of thing. You cannot afford to be careless in anything if you would win the prize. And so it is in the Christian race. To be "temperate in all things" means that as Christians we must keep a watch upon ourselves.

And this is worth while, for Paul says: "They do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible." The winner in the Grecian game felt it reward enough if he had a crown of laurel placed on his head in the presence of the applauding throng. Such a crown would soon wither away, however, but not so the crown which God gives to the victorious soul. That is an incorruptible crown, there is no decay in it and it lasts forever.

What is the nature of that crown? It is hard to express it in human language. Paul was once caught up into Paradise, he tells us, "and heard unspeakable words which it is not possible for man to utter." And this illustrates why we cannot understand much that we accept by faith of "the things God hath prepared for them that love him." They are impossible to utter.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Second Quarter. Lesson XII. John XX. 1-16. June 7, 1917.

THE RISEN LORD.

The record is charmingly natural when it describes the errand of the women to the sepulcher. They run with additional spices to complete the embalming, desisted from because of the approach of the Sabbath.

They start precipitately, forgetting to take some of the spices strong enough to roll away the stone for them. They well reflect in their action the mental state of all the disciples. It is improbable that they had forgotten the saying of Jesus about rising the third day; but it is evident they did not attach a literal significance to his words. Their ingenuousness is incontestable.

The resurrection was as complete a surprise to them as to their enemies. The very spices in their hands were evidence of their honesty. Their sorrowing suspicion of a theft of the body proved them no party to such a robbery.

That garden near to Calvary witnessed the most remarkable guard-relief of history. Four Roman soldiers, inured to all common causes of alarm, quaked like old earth herself, and swooned away, and with returning consciousness probably fled into the city, leaving their spears and shields upon the ground. Angels mounted guard in their stead. One of them possibly outshone his fellows. The snowy lustrous of his raiment matched well his immaculate nature. The glory of his appearance was like an electric coronation.

Among the holy women conspicuous at the cross and the grave, Mary Magdalene stands easily first. By some pitiful blunder, she has been confused, in art and in literature, with "the woman who was a sinner," so that her very name is used to describe a class of social outcasts. There is absolutely no evidence for this. About all we know of her is that she was from Magdala, on the southwestern coast of the Sea of Galilee. It has been said that there is reason to suppose that Mary Magdalene was in some way connected with the ministry of our Lord's disciples. He had set her free from some terrible mental or physical malady, and she gave him the holy love of a warm and generous nature.

She, with greater fervor perhaps than the others, started earlier (while it was yet dark) on the errand to the tomb. Her heart was richer than even what was in her hand.

The description of Mary's recognition of Jesus is one of the most unique and skillful things in literature. Much in little! "Jesus saith unto her, 'Mary!'"

She turned herself, and said, unto him, "My Master."

An entirely unnecessary mystical meaning has been attached to Jesus' words, "Touch me not!" Paraphrased, they might be read: "Don't cling to me now; there will be opportunity for you to express your affection in the future, for I have not yet left the world. Hurry to my brethren, and tell."

The final scene of the first Easter Sunday is the interior of the tomb in that very upper room in which Jesus ate the Last Supper with his disciples. The shepherdless sheep are covering behind closed doors. They are afraid of eavesdroppers or even a violent assault of their enemies. "Peace!"

What a word to be spoken in such a time and by such a person! The "peace" of Jesus upon his disciples was symbolical act. It is as if he was instituting a new sacrament, for he says to them just as he did when he handed them the bread and the cup, "Take the Holy Spirit."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.

These women were in the way of loving service. That is why they were the first witnesses of the resurrection. Loyal going leads to royal knowing. "If any will do, he shall know."

The stone was rolled away to exhibit the emptiness of the tomb. It was not rolled away for Jesus, but for his disciples; not that he might come forth, but that they might enter and see that he was gone.

The Crusades were a fight for a will-o'-the-wisp. The holy sepulcher, so called, is in the heart of a city, and it is now conceded, can not have been the place of entombment. The true site is lost. It is well. We worship not the place, but the Person.

The Oriental manner of burial is interesting; the winding-sheet and napkin, emblematic of rock-hewn chamber, loculi, like stone, were laid. Stone for door, sometimes shaped like millstone and set in groove, so as to be rolled and held in position by a smaller stone like a chuck under a wheel.

It was just such a place that Jesus took on that first Easter morning. He first took precaution to rolling the linen strip with which he had been swathed, and laid it on the spot where his feet had rested; then he did the same with the smaller strip, called a napkin in our translation. Thus he left an ocular proof that his body had not been removed in haste or by thieves.

The love, faith, fidelity of womanhood is transfigured in the resurrection scene.

What was really her greatest gain? Suppose she had found the body still in the tomb. It would have been the most disastrous "find of history." What Mary ignorantly deprecated was really the infinite gain of humanity. The very emptiness of Jesus' tomb is its chief glory.

The open tomb was converted into a bureau of information for the troubled disciples. White-ivered attendants were there to point them to the place where the Lord lay and to the grave clothes laid in such orderly fashion as to preclude the idea of a hasty and clandestine removal, and to announce the blessed truth, "He is risen!"

John 17:1917. Hebrews XII. 18-29

WHAT IS REVERENCE AND WHY SHOULD WE BE REVERENT.

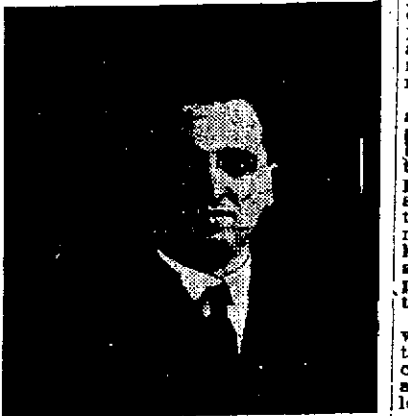

It is absurd to say "At such a time I will be reverent." Reverence is not an occasional mood. It is a life. One may not be all the time performing specific acts of reverence, but if he is genuinely religious, he will be incessantly reverent. The precise act is as vain as sounding brass if the continuous attitude of reverence is not beneath it. Worship, audible or visible, if acceptable to God and profitable to man must be the outward expression of an inward state. If it is this it is like the eagle mounting to heaven on its strong pinions. Reverence senses the immanence of God. It roots itself in the consciousness of the Divine Presence. It says "I am with God, God is with me." Reverence may express itself in worship which is the acknowledgement of God's worth (worth-ship). It is blended love and awe.

INSTALL NEW PASTOR AT LUTHERAN CHURCH

G. J. Muller to Be Formally Installed at St. Peter's Church at Services This Evening.

Pastor G. J. Muller, who recently came to this city from Brooklyn, New York, will tonight be formally installed as the pastor of the St. Peter's Evangelical Lutheran church. The services will be held at half past seven at the church and will be followed by a reception in the Sunday school rooms for Pastor and Mrs. Muller.

PASTOR G. J. MULLER.

Pastor G. K. Rubrecht of Milwaukee and Professor J. Stump of Maywood, Ill. will preach at the installation services. Both men are high up in Lutheran church circles, and will bring a message to the members of that church in this city which they cannot well afford to neglect.

The members of the congregation, and the friends of the church are cordially invited to attend both the services and the reception afterwards.

Pastor Muller came to this city with an enviable reputation as a preacher and as a constructive worker for the church, and though he has been in Janesville but a short time, his congregation are congratulating themselves over their success in securing a man of his type to lead their work.

Several novel features of entertainment have been arranged by the committee. An impromptu program is also planned. It is expected by the committee that over one hundred friends of Mr. Soullman will participate and they request that invitation return cards be promptly attended to.

THIRTY-NINE SALOONS REQUEST FOR LICENSE

There will be at least one less saloon in Janesville next year, beginning July 1st, than in the past twelve months. The time period in which application for licenses could be made closed last night. Three breweries and thirty-nine saloons sought licenses. Beginning July one, last year there were forty-one saloons and three breweries in the city. Last fall the city commission revoked one permit for city ordinance violation.

MACDOWELL CLUB IN CONCERT ON MONDAY

Interesting Program Planned for Next Monday Evening at Congregational Church.

Janesville's music-loving public will have another opportunity of hearing a concert of true merit when the Macdowell club will present a free program at the Congregational church next Monday evening at eight o'clock. Included in the program will be vocal numbers, instrumental selections, a brief organ recital, and a chorus of twelve women's voices.

The reputation which the Macdowell club has established for itself in Janesville assures the high calibre of the concert to be given Monday, and a large attendance is expected. No charge is made for these concerts, and though a collection is taken up, no one need feel any obligation about contributing. The object of the club has always been to encourage music in Janesville, and a large attendance is expected, no matter what the material return to the organization may be.

Throughout the year a number of junior concerts are arranged by the club, and every effort is made by the members to develop among the children a true appreciation of the better things that music has to offer. Monthly programs at library hall, much encouragement has been given to the young musical students of the city, and development of Janesville as a musical center has been furthered to no small extent.

Since the organization of the club and the inauguration of their plan of giving free recitals, the concerts have been steadily increasing in popularity. From many of the programs, people are turned away because of the size of the audience. The efforts of this little group of music-lovers, have met with the praise of all who have known of them, and their concerts are worthy of the enthusiastic support which has been given them in the past.

In the past the greater part of the work and arrangements are done by the members, some few expenses incurred by the concerts must be met, and for these contributions in the collection are welcome.

RALPH SOULMAN GUEST OF STAG AT DELAVAN

Hundred Friends of Prominent Young Man Entertain for Him on Next Monday Evening at Lake.

One hundred and twenty-five invitations were mailed today to as many Janesville young men to participate in a big stag party Monday night at Lake Delavan in honor of Ralph C. Soullman, who will soon take as his bride Miss Lucile Ryde, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Langdon Howard R. Clithero and Earl I. Fuzzell composed the committee in charge of arrangements.

The trip will be made overland with automobiles, the start being planned at 6 p. m. from the Elks' club. Dinner of eight courses will be served at Lakeside hotel.

Several novel features of entertainment have been arranged by the committee. An impromptu program is also planned. It is expected by the committee that over one hundred friends of Mr. Soullman will participate and they request that invitation return cards be promptly attended to.

THIRTY-NINE SALOONS REQUEST FOR LICENSE

There will be at least one less saloon in Janesville next year, beginning July 1st, than in the past twelve months. The time period in which application for licenses could be made closed last night. Three breweries and thirty-nine saloons sought licenses. Beginning July one, last year there were forty-one saloons and three breweries in the city. Last fall the city commission revoked one permit for city ordinance violation.

GREATEST SOUTHPAW IS HARD TO SELECT

Selecting the greatest southpaw of all time in big league endeavor isn't a matter of gathering the dope on Babe Ruth, Eddie Plank, Ed. Plank, Rube Waddell, Doc White and the others on down the list of off-handers who have made baseball history. Eddie Plank undoubtedly has built himself a pedestal on which he stands proudly in a class by himself, but Waddell and White also attained heights and positions would be glad to reach. With Waddell it was more of a joke than anything else, but his record is so fine—his ability too pronounced to be left out of a line of hurlers who have dashed a wonderful lot of stuff.

It is hardly fair to say that Babe Ruth is the game's greatest left-hander now, and it is equally unfair to say that Eddie Plank is the greatest left-hander of the past. Ruth has done remarkably well against National league pitching, but Schupp never has had the chance to show what he could do against the American league kind. So there is no chance for comparison.

Doc White was one of the chief reasons for the White Sox championship in 1906. He and Ed. Walsh between them made the Fielder Jones reputation. When the two of them departed from American league ways, championships among the White Sox became very, very scarce.

Waddell picked the Athletics up at most by his own bootstraps and he still was going when he became a member of the Browns. His gradual decline until he found himself a Northern leaguer was just as brilliant. He never did anything that didn't sparkle. His eccentricities and utter disregard of training rules sent him to the minors and finally to his grave.

Undoubtedly honors among southpaws should be equally distributed between Plank and Waddell, both members of the Athletics when in their prime.

Coach Lawson, Robertson of the University of Pennsylvania, back team says Clinton Larsen of Brigham Young University, Utah, who won the high jump event in Penn's carnival last April, can jump 6 feet 8 inches. Robertson says he never saw an athlete leap as neatly as Larsen. Most athletes, Robertson pointed out, take a back jump when they leap for the bar. Larsen runs about fifty yards to get up speed, and he does something that few athletes do—he jumps with two feet. He strikes the ground with his right foot and then his left. The action is much like that of a running horse's front feet when galloping.

ED CICOTTE, PITCHING VET, HAS NEW DELIVERY THAT'S TRICKY YET LEGAL

Ed Cicotte.

Ed Cicotte, the White Sox pitching veteran, has a new delivery that has caused a mild panic among American league batters. Cicotte's new one acts exactly like the tabooed emery ball, but he has shown it to be perfectly legal. He polishes a surface of the ball on a wet spot on his shirt and with the rest of the ball rough and soiled he grips it in a way that makes it act as deceptively as the emery ball when it approaches the batter.

MORRIS MILLER

The sensational ending of Jim Barry, the well known heavyweight fighter, during a row at Colon, Panama, brings to mind the statement of John L. Sullivan, one time the greatest champion of them all, when he was in Milwaukee with Barry in 1906. At that time John L. was touring the country under the management of Frank Hall and was traveling through the west Hall had picked up Jim Barry and Charley Cutler.

The fellow was wonderfully developed and could hit with the power of a trippammer. He scored knockouts over numerous heavyweights at that time and Hall began to coach him along for some big fights. It was then Barry began to break over the traces and was hard to handle and began to dissipate.

It was not long before this style of living told on him severely. He fought the toughest heavyweights in the country, including Sam Langford, Jim Flynn, Joe Jeane, Tony Ross, Sam McVea, Porky Flynn, Gunboat Smith, and men of that class; in fact, he fought Sam Langford so often that it was looked upon as a monthly affair.

Barry became addicted to the use of drugs, and the wonder is that the man was able to recover and get in condition again the last year or two. A couple of years ago he was considered down and out, but he took a great grace and began to build himself up again so that before going to Panama he was quite around the two hundred and in fairly good condition.

In a letter from Colon the writer states Barry had put up a good battle with Joe Jeane, but lost the decision after six rounds of hard fighting. The following evening Barry was around town and got into an argument with a gambler over some debt. There was a mixup and in the melee Barry was shot and killed. It is too bad a man with Barry's splendid physique and promising future did not make more of himself, but there have been many others who have gone the same way.

The release of Outfielder Al Platte by Louisville to Chattanooga leaves the Cardinals with but one extra outfielder and he is by trade a pitcher. The extra man is the Cuban, Adolfo Luque, who has shown such ability chasing flies and hitting the ball that he practically has given up the job of pitching.

"Bill" Snow of Harvard, winner of the Francis Harden Burr scholarship, and Charles Taft of Yale, who has been awarded the Gordon Brown prize and medal, are two fine types of the athlete and all-around students of the big eastern universities. Both are now in the service of their country.

The St. Paul club has turned Lewis Malouf back to the Brooklyn club and Sammy Bohne has been returned to the St. Paul Cardinals. This means a shift in the Saints' infield. Ellison comes in from the outfield to play third base. McMillan will play second and Nicholson, secured from Detroit, goes to the outfield to replace Ellison there.

FREE PASS EPISODE BEING INVESTIGATED

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 15.—The legislative investigation of the so-called free pass episode is on its way. Within five hours after Lieutenant Governor Dittmar had appointed the legislative committee composed of Senators Skogmo, Wilkinson and Zumbach, a meeting had been held, organization had been perfected and the machine for getting the information under the resolution was in motion.

The first information asked for by the committee was the records of the Wisconsin railroad commission showing to whom railroad passes have been issued in Wisconsin. Under the Wisconsin railroad law, when a railroad issues a pass to one of its own employees or to others, a duplicate record must immediately be forwarded to the railroad commission. These records are kept on file for public inspection. It is understood that upwards of 150 passes have been issued in this state to individuals, but it is for the purpose of ascertaining through whom these passes were issued and the reason for the issuance of the passes that the committee has made the request to the railroad commission for the official record.

"We will start right with the examining of witnesses," declared Senator George B. Skogmo today. "We are going fully into this matter. We are going to find out all there is about it."

To aid the committee, the members have called in John F. Baker of the attorney general's staff. Mr. Baker has had wide experience with trials of law suits arising under the state fire marshal law. As attorney for this department, he has had considerable to do with ferreting out records and detecting the reasons for certain acts. Under the state fire marshal law, he is selected by the committee as an attorney to conduct the investigation. The committee will select one of the legislative stenographers as secretary and the stenographic force in the senate will probably be summoned to take the testimony. It is under consideration that the weekend of the legislature will be devoted to hearing so that a report can be made to the senate on the matter as soon as possible.

They were meeting all corners in four-round contests and Barry was making a splendid showing at that time, so that Sullivan took a great interest in him and started to teach him all he knew of the fighting game. John L. was not backward in stating that Barry had the making of a world's champion.

Enduring. "I suppose you and your wife can remember your first quarrel," said the meddlesome person. "Remember it!" returned Mr. Growcher. "I should say so! It isn't over yet!"

ASSEMBLY MAY PASS NEW BANK TAX BILL AT PRESENT SESSION

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 15.—Indications that the assembly will pass a new bank tax bill were evidenced late Thursday afternoon when the house refused to non-concur in the Puller measure by a vote of 37 to 29. This bill provides that the basis of assessment of banks shall be the capital stock, surplus and undivided profits. It further provides that the relative ratio for valuation of property in the community shall then be applied proportionately to the bank stock. In other words, if the property in the community is assessed at 85 percent of its full value, the capital stock, surplus and undivided profits of a bank shall be assessed at 85 percent. When the bill came up for consideration, Assemblyman Riler H. Young made a fight for the measure. Assemblyman Spoor of Green Lake county said he had a number of letters against the bill and he hoped it would be killed. Assemblyman Van Doren said there were sufficient laws on the statute books at the present time for the taxation of banks and no additional laws were needed. After the assembly refused to non-concur in the bill it was laid over for further consideration until next Wednesday. The assembly killed the bill providing for a supreme court commissioner.

A Slap at Karel. An assembly judiciary committee bill providing that municipal judges may be candidates to hold political office was amended by Judge Ross of Beloit so that municipal and county judges cannot become candidates for political office. The prevailing opinion is that the amendment as adopted would make ineligible Judge C. Backus, Milwaukee municipal judge, and John C. Karel of Milwaukee, county judge, as gubernatorial candidates in the future.

Fill conference was given to the Baxter bill providing for the creation of a state cement purchasing commission. Senator Baxter claims if the state purchases the cement for highway work for the state and counties, it can secure a much lower price, saving many thousands of dollars for the people.

To Change Commission Plan. Governor Philip has signed the bill simplifying the method for the abandoning of the commission form of government by a city if adopted. The question of abandonment must be submitted to a vote of the people and the direct question that shall be printed on the ballot is "Shall the commission form of government be abandoned?" Of the cities of the state that have adopted the commission plan, most of them are enthusiastic over the results. In a few cities there are complaints. Because the old law on the subject of abandonment was ambiguous, it was deemed advisable to pass a new law on the subject. If a city voted to abandon the commission form, the next city election shall be held and conducted and the officers elected under the old form of government that existed before the adoption of the commission plan.

Executive approval has also been given to the Whitet non-resident tuition bill. This measure provides that any student at the university, whose parents have been bona fide residents of the state for one year, shall not be compelled to pay a non-resident tuition fee. Under the 1915 law if a person was a non-resident at the time the law was passed, he remained a non-resident throughout his entire course and had to pay a non-resident fee regardless of the fact that the person might have later taken up legal residence in the state. There were so many complaints that it was deemed advisable to correct the law. A new law has been passed by this legislature and signed by the governor.

A want ad will rent that house.

HOW OUR WAR CHIEF KEEPS IN FINE TRIM FOR STRENUOUS DUTY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Washington, June 15.—Simplicity marks the daily routine of President Wilson in these busy days at the capital. There is plenty of work for the chief executive but on orders of his physician the president devotes a certain part of each day to "keeping in trim."

Even holes of golf in the morning, a theater two evenings a week, a short automobile ride in the afternoon and an occasional close friend at luncheon or dinner constitutes the recreation that provides a half way relaxation from the strain of executive problems.

President Wilson is a man of unusual concentration powers. When he considers a legislative measure it is weighed from every possible angle. All else is excluded.

He plays just as hard as he works. This, it has been said, enables him to get more benefit from his limited amount of exercise.

On the links every fiber is concentrated on the immediate drive or putt he is executing. At the theater the performers either hold his undivided attention or bore him to distraction. A well trained animal act or a rollicking comedian are always rewarded by hearty applause and true ringing laughter from the presidential box in Washington's vaudeville theater.

Appointments with the president are arranged a day in advance. Politicians are stationed at every entrance and only those who have appointments are allowed to enter the White House grounds.

Recently a friend relative of the president, here for a short stay, found it impossible to call at the White House.

Fifteen minutes at the usual time allowed for interviews but it is seldom that they last that long.

The secret service guard has been doubled. When the president goes for a walk they go with him. When he attends the theater they scatter on every floor of the playhouse. The secret service automobile follows the president's car to the length of the crowd which congregates when the machine stops is closely scrutinized before the president alights.

These precautions are voluntary on the part of the secret service men. The president has never requested extra protection. He does not delay stepping from his automobile until the service men have sized up the crowd. Not that the president is nervousness on the president's part is over noticeable in public.

The wisdom of not neglecting exercise and rest is shown in his personal appearance. Despite the stress of war problems, the president is "looking fit as a fiddle."

AUSTRALIAN OPINION ON U. S. WITH ALLIES

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Melbourne, Australia, June 15.—Certification over the fact that the United States is now actively on the side of Great Britain and her allies in the war is expressed by the newspapers of Australia.

Advertisements of every class and every kind join in Great Britain and in welcoming America into the war which binds us to our gallant European brothers in arms," says the Melbourne Age. "And our welcome is not the least cordial because most of us had all but despaired until quite lately that she would ever respond to the stimuli which have already sent 30,000 Australian lads to venture death in pursuit of an unselfish and resplendent ideal on the tortured battle ends of France. America at length has approved our cause and justified our action in the manner unexceptional."

"The United States should have decided to join the Allies in the war a tremendous event in the history of the world," said the Melbourne Argus. "It is the most momentous event of the war since the careful days of August, 1914. It is a thing that a virile nation like the United States should decide to fight for the defense of civilization. The United States will prove a strong ally, strong in influence and in resources."

The Sydney Daily Telegraph, which has frequently shown its sympathy with President Wilson's policy, said: "America at war will devote her colossal strength to clearing the earth of the curse of Prussianism."

The Sydney Sun, an important evening paper, asserted that "the world may truthfully say of these American cohorts of ours that they never went to war in a spirit of mere greed nor with tyrannous ideals before them. Their history places them spiritually beside the great democracies of France and Britain and opposes them to the German ideals of conquest and conquest's sake. Historically America on the battle field has been on the side of the angels, and once again she fights with the forces of freedom and honor against the darker powers of cruelty and tyranny with which the earth is periodically cursed."

"The more fact that the first people to be heard speaking for modern liberty is still in the battle has heartened up the whole world," declared the Sydney Bulletin.

Height of Thrift.
"The grouch is certainly a rightward, isn't he?" said the old fogey.
"He sure is," replied the wise guy.
"He'd change you interest if he lent you his moral support."—Cleveland Enquirer.

TRENCH TALES.

"No, there's very little bayonet work done by the Boches," said a Scotch sergeant, discussing German methods of fighting. "I'll tell you a queer thing that happened to a chap in my lot. Some wounded got left in a village we got into. We weren't there to take it but these chaps were eager and went on too far. Some of us went up to bring the wounded back on stretchers. When we were just outside the village the Germans put over a barrage—something, terrific it was, and we ran back to a trench. This chap in talking about jumped down into it without looking out, and the first thing he knew was that something had shot through his leg and he saw the point of a bayonet sticking out of his thigh. The trench was full of our reserves and he had jumped down onto a man's bayonet. All the chap that owned the bayonet said was: 'A bloody one, you were.' I've known since and he said the doctor at the clearing station told him it was only the second bayonet wound he'd seen during the war."

Gen. Sir Herbert C. O. Plumer is the newest hero in Great Britain. This picture of General Plumer, with two of Field Marshal Haig's chief commanders, was taken recently on the French front.

ONE HUNDRED WOMEN AT KNITTING PARTY HELP NAVY LEAGUE

Spend Busy Afternoon at Home of Mrs. H. S. Lovejoy Making Comforts for U. S. Sailors.

The click of knitting needles and the counting of stitches was greatly in evidence at the "open house" held by the comforts committee of the Navy League at the home of Mrs. Henry S. Lovejoy on Thursday afternoon. Patriotism was the keynote from the moment the guests were admitted by the little white gown girl with her Liberty cap, to the time tea was served in the spacious dining room, where red, white and blue flowers were massed on the table and mantel shelf. Mrs. V. P. Richardson and Mrs. Stanley Smith presided at the tea and coffee urns and half a dozen young ladies served the accompanying sandwiches, cakes, and red, white and blue candies.

Wool, needles and other supplies for knitting were on hand. Mrs. McCoy and Mrs. E. J. Haumerson. Trade was so brisk in this department that they were obliged to replenish their stock several times. Over $40 worth of material was disposed of to the would-be knitters; also printed directions from the department for making the various articles needed—the helmets, wristlets, jackets and scarves were distributed. As the knitting work necessitates a capacious bag, several of these were on sale also. Capable teachers were also on hand to start the willing workers, and they were mostly grouped in the sun parlor, where a winder was kept busy winding the stout yarn into balls.

Membership for the Navy League was solicited by Mrs. J. G. Rexford, who used her persuasive powers to secure names for the list, at $3 per year. Tickets were also on sale for the Red Cross benefit at the Apollo on Tuesday of Frederick Ward in the "vicar of Wakefield."

Flags were draped in various places in the room, and posters of the Navy League were prominently displayed. About 100 ladies were present during the afternoon and enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. Lovejoy and the comforts committee. Beside interesting so many new workers in making these articles so much needed in the navy, quite a tidy little sum was realized by the event of yesterday toward buying materials for the work.

ASSEMBLY SUSTAINS ARMORY BILL VETO AFTER HARD FIGHT

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 15.—The assembly Thursday evening sustained Governor Philipp's veto of the Wilcox armory aid bill. The vote was a tie, 31 to 31. It requires a two-thirds vote to pass a bill over the veto of the governor. Early in the week the senate passed the bill over the veto 17 to 5, but it failed in the assembly. The principal fight against the bill and in favor of the governor's veto was made by Assemblyman Grell of Johnson Creek. Assemblymen Rosa and Van Doren made the principle arguments in favor of over-riding the veto and standing by the original assembly record.

Charge of Politics.
"We don't need armories at this time," declared Assemblyman Grell. "We need plenty of out doors to train men and there ought to be enough of that in Wisconsin. Talking about patriotism and loyalty and all that stuff, I would like to say that the senator on the other side who has introduced this bill is looking for notoriety. He is trying to use us as a tool to gain it. It has been stated in the papers that he is a candidate for governor. Call me loyal or disloyal, this is a useless expenditure of money. We are giving little too strong a stuff of this kind. This bill provides that not more than 15 percent of the amount appropriated to the national guard shall be used in building armories. We may be called back here in a year and have to appropriate millions for this national guard. Then look at the sum that the state would have to spend for armories. I hope the veto will be sustained."

Riley H. Young of Waukesha said if money was to be spent it should be on the boys at the front and not on armories. Carl Hanson said the bill was a dead letter and he was for sustaining the executive.

Rosa Urges Passage.
"I don't see that there has been a single reason given why we should change our votes," said Assemblyman Rosa of Beloit. "This is a good bill. Troops are being raised and there should be some place to train them in inclement weather. We have given an unlimited appropriation to the state council of defense. It probably has accomplished nothing, but the money is gone. Here is a chance to do something for preparedness that will show up. The bill limits the amount that can be spent and limits the number of armories. The talk that hundreds of thousands of dollars might annually be spent under this bill is not true. Companies of soldiers are being born all over the state and they have no place to drill. We should start building armories now, and I hope the vote will overturn the veto."

"The city of Shawano has asked that I support this bill and I am going to," declared Assemblyman Van Doren. "Adjutant General Holway came before our committee and urged a bill of this kind as an absolute necessity. He told us that almost as much was annually being spent for rents of halls as would be expended under this Wilcox bill. It ought to pass."

Assemblyman Carl Hansen asked that the veto of Governor Philipp be read. After Chief Clerk Shaffer had completed the reading of the veto, there were a few additional remarks and the vote was taken, showing a tie. The roll call follows:

How the Vote Stood.
To pass bill over veto: Armstrong,

Armenian, Beggs, Bradley, Chipman, Engstrom, Freehoff, J. C. Hanson, C. E. Hanson, Jensen, Johnson, Kautsch, Luehrs, Melvin, F. V. Miller, O'Brien, Poole, Rappell, Rosa, Saugan, Schiewitz, Schroeder, W. H. Spoor, Stoen, Van Doren, Vangan, B. Webster, Whiteside, Woodward, Willains, Wickett—31.

Against the bill—Anderson, Autenbacher, Bernardy, Carter, Chapple, Clark, Edwards, Engel, Everson, Galbraith, Gamper, Gettleman, Grass, Grell, Carl Hanson, Redrich, Hincman, Jordan, Ken, Koepsel, Kubatzki, Kurtenacker, Ohl, Peterson, Poor, Rogers, Ruka, Smith (clerk), Turner, Young and Whittall—31.

The roll call was solidly in favor of the veto. The bill is dead for the session. The rules do not permit a reconsideration of a veto message.
